The UC Davis MIND Institute supports critical research designed to understand the causes and to develop effective diagnoses, treatments, preventions, and ultimately, cures for neurodevelopmental disorders, such as, Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD), Fragile X Syndrome, Down syndrome, Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD), and 22q11.2 Deletion Syndrome.

The Subject Tracking System (STS) is the MIND Institute’s database of individuals interested in participating in research studies. Participation in this database, STS, is for research purposes and is entirely voluntary. If you choose to participate, please complete the on-line form. By clicking ‘YES’ you agree to participate in this database. Your contact information will be added to our database and will be accessible by our staff when searching for participants eligible to be included in studies. If you or your family member is eligible, someone will contact you to explain the study and see if you are interested in participating. Remember, you may decline participation in studies at any time.

You will be notified of opportunities to participate in research that may add to our knowledge of neurodevelopmental disorders, but you may not directly benefit by participating in this database. All information registered in STS is considered private and confidential. STS adheres to strict Federal, State and University guidelines to protect individual rights and privacy. Your name will not be given to any researcher outside of the MIND Institute without your explicit, written permission.

Absolute confidentiality cannot be guaranteed, since research documents are not protected from subpoena. Your alternative is to not participate in this database. You may refuse participation now or discontinue participation at any time without penalty or loss of benefits to which you are otherwise entitled. There is no cost or compensation to participate in this database.

If you have any questions about STS, contact Brittani Hilscher at 916-703-0299.

If you have any questions regarding your rights and participation as a research subject, contact the IRB Administration at 916-703-9151.
